P R E S I D E N T - G I N N Y B U C K A L E W

Dear Members and Friends,

I want to take this opportunity to thank all of you for your thoughts and prayers as I negotiate this new chapter in my life. The passing of my husband, Steve, was very sudden and I am working through all of the paper work associated with his death. I also want to thank my wonderful Board for the beautiful flowers and for stepping up and taking charge this past month. I plan to be back at our next meeting, even if a little bit scatter brained!

Thank you to all who purchased 26 Club tickets. They are all sold. And—a special thank you to Lynne Lawhorn for selling over 100 for us! It is our only fund raiser for a two year period and helps us support our scholarships and other philanthropic projects.

The election is right around the corner and again, please talk to your neighbors and friends and get them to the polls. The Golden Ticket (put out by MCRCC—there are a lot of different ones floating around) is available at the district office and on their web site. Download it or pick some up and pass them around.

Again, I covet your continued prayers. Steve and I have been together since I was 15 and living alone is going to be a challenge.

Your President, Ginny

"Never Forget" is what we say for September 11th. But it seems we always forget, or history wouldn't keep repeating itself.

We've got a big election coming up, and we need to stress how important it is before we find ourselves slipping into socialism. Vote! And get your fellow Republicans to vote.

Only one card was sent out this month to our President, Ginny Buckelew, on the loss of her husband, Steve. Prayers continue.

If you have any concerns or celebrations, contact me at 928-486-0027 or kljagt@yahoo.com.

MEMBERSHIP

Well it's that time of year again! I like to call it "membership renewal" season. We would love to see each of you renew your LBRW membership for 2027 by the end of this year. That would be a pretty great achievement! And do help that along, I have a fun incentive for you that I will tell you about at our October meeting. But, in the meantime, keep inviting your friends to join us and let's keep growing this big RED tidal wave as we slide into the November elections! We can do this! Vote RED!!!

I look forward to seeing all of you at our October meeting. Good things are coming!!

Reach out to me with any questions or ideas you may have. I love to hear from you! 951-858-1862 or lbrw3rdvp@gmail.com

SPOTLIGHT MEMBER — CINDY JAKS

Hi, I'm Cindy Jaks, and I'm honored to be this month's Spotlight Member!

I joined the LBRWC in October 2025, and I've really enjoyed learning more—in person—about our local and regional politicians. I was drawn to this club because it has given me the opportunity to meet wonderful people who share my conservative values, love for our great country, and faith in God, our Savior.

My husband, David Jaks, and I first purchased a vacation home in Havasu in 2009, thinking we would eventually retire here. It has always been our happy place. We love the lake, exploring the river, off-roading in the winter, and, most of all, the open space and sense of freedom we feel living here. We loved it so much that we decided we didn't want to wait for retirement! In 2017, we made the big move to Havasu full time. We weren't quite ready to retire, but we were ready to start living the life we had been dreaming about.

I own Jaks Marketing Group, which I established in 2005. I work with clients throughout Arizona, Nevada, and California. Having a virtual office here in Havasu—and traveling to meet with clients each month—has allowed me to build my business while enjoying the lifestyle I always dreamed of.

After spending 30 years as an electrician in California, David quickly obtained his Arizona electrical contractor's license. For the past nine years, he has been serving customers throughout Lake Havasu City as Jaks Electric.

We have two daughters who make us incredibly proud. Our oldest is an accountant and is engaged to be married, and our youngest attends Mohave Community College, where she is pursuing her dream of becoming a physical therapist.

When I'm not working, you'll usually find me doing something that keeps me moving—or laughing! I enjoy booty camp, book club, playing Mahjonn, and pickleball. I love being active, trying new things, and spending time with good friends.

But at the heart of who I am is my love for family, faith, and making the most of this life we've been given.

I believe in living life to the fullest, having no regrets, and continuing to grow in my faith along the way. I'm grateful to call Lake Havasu City home and thankful for the friendships, fellowship, and opportunity to learn and serve through the LBRWC. I'm looking forward to getting to know more of you and enjoying this journey together!

Council Corner by David Diaz, Vice Mayor

The following is a brief recap of current happenings regarding your LHC City Council activities

The LHC City Council is always here for your needs and concerns. Feel free to reach out at any time.

Household Hazardous Waste Event. As mentioned at Tuesday's Council meeting, our next Household Hazardous Waste Event has officially been scheduled for Saturday, December 12th. These events continue to be very popular with our residents, and we are pleased to now offer them twice per year. Mark your calendars, and we'll share additional event details as we get closer.

Planning Session. As we begin coordinating for next year's Planning Session, we are tentatively looking at February 4th. CIP projects (Capital Improvement Projects) will be part of the discussion again this year. It's still early in the planning process and Council members will be sending any initial thoughts on the format or topics we would like considered to the City Manager.

LHUSD and LHC IGA. We are currently coordinating with the Lake Havasu Unified School District to find a time for our teams to meet and discuss the IGA (Inter Governmental Agreement). Once a date is confirmed, we'll get the meeting scheduled and continue moving the discussion forward. We are hopeful we can schedule a meeting soon, so we can start the process of negotiating language for the City Council's consideration.

Ballfields and Splash Pad. At the next Parks and Recreation Advisory Commission meeting, they will be reviewing options for the possible construction and location of ballfields and the possible construction of a splash pad. Their recommendations will come before the City Council for our consideration and possible final direction.

Fees. At the October 13th Council meeting, Jill Olsen (City Director of Finance) and her team will provide a presentation to the City Council outlining the City's fee process. The presentation will provide an overview of how fees are reviewed and ask the City Council to identify our process moving forward.

Second Bridge. For the Tuesday September 22nd Council meeting, Council will see a resolution on the agenda for the proposed naming of the Second Bridge as Freedom Bridge, along with the naming of the connecting street as Freedom Avenue. There is a groundbreaking ceremony for the Second Bridge on Tuesday October 13th at 8:30AM. It's on the Island at the parking lot on the right before Red Rock (formerly Crazy Horse). We are inviting all citizens to attend and it will be a nice event to celebrate construction of the Second Bridge. Please come with family and friends if able.

Regards,

David V. Diaz

Greenland Bases Forever by Clarice Feldman Sept 20, 2026

This week the U.S. entered into an agreement with both Denmark and Greenland which protects U.S. sovereignty, deters Russian and Chinese aggression, circles an increasingly fey and unreliable Canada with U.S. states and bases, and makes the U.S. exit from a sclerotic NATO more possible, if not more likely.

First, a little background. Contrary to the press and jokesters who ridiculed President Trump's offer to buy Greenland, a territory of Denmark with about 56,000 inhabitants, we have long known its strategic importance. In 1951, we entered into an agreement with Denmark allowing us to establish a base at Thule. Article XIV of that Treaty states that "This Agreement, being in implementation of the North Atlantic Treaty, shall remain in effect for the duration of the North Atlantic Treaty." If we left NATO or it otherwise ceased to exist, we had no clear right to maintain defenses there. Nor did we have exclusive rights to ban foreign investments which posed security threats to us. In time, the treaty was inadequate to protect our interests, as Russia now had ICBMs and Russian nuclear submarines were navigating Arctic waters. Moreover, the small population of Greenland was talking about independence, and Russian and Chinese governments were not averse to bribing them substantially in exchange for operating rights there. Our agreement was with Denmark, and it's unclear it could bind an independent Greenland.

It could even mean an independent Greenland strongly under Chinese influence might be on the other side of the negotiating table. In sum, for a number of reasons, that dated Cold War-era treaty needed to be supplanted by something better, and better is what we got. This week's agreement, which cost us nothing, guarantees forever "the complete ability to do what is necessary in Greenland in order to secure and defend "our security and that of Greenland."

"Additionally, from now on, no U.S. adversary can ever have a base in Greenland, have a military presence in Greenland, or make sensitive investments in Greenland, without our express written approval."

Why, it's as if Trump looked at the world map and drew a red-line fortress around the U.S., protecting the North from bases in Greenland, protecting the South by ousting Maduro from Venezuela and setting up the toppling of Cuba while clearing out China from the Panama Canal.

There's something in this for all three parties: Denmark retains its Greenland territory; Greenland retains its rights to govern itself on internal matters, and the U.S. gets exclusive security rights permanently.

Saying he wanted to buy Greenland was a shrewd negotiating tactic, "anchoring" that is, clarifying what we really wanted, and forcing Denmark and Greenland to do the same so a mutual agreement could be reached.

Since at least 2019, Trump has publicly spoken out about the need to protect the Arctic corridor by replacing the 1951 Treaty. And he was reviled unfairly for the effort.

The geopolitical chessboard has been permanently rewritten, and the architects of managed American decline are staring into the abyss of their own irrelevance. Donald Trump has executed the [sic] one of the most significant territorial and security consolidations since the purchase of Alaska in 1867. By finalizing an infinite-term security agreement over Greenland, the United States has officially established an immovable strategic garrison at the apex of the globe. While the corporate press and the progressive foreign policy establishment spent years sneering at the proposal, dismissing Arctic sovereignty as an eccentric real estate fantasy, Trump methodically forced Copenhagen to the table. The United States now holds absolute veto power over adversarial access, permanent basing rights, and full authority over Greenlandic security at zero cost to the American taxpayer. Moscow is decisively locked out of the vital maritime corridors of the North Atlantic. Beijing is permanently evicted from Arctic rare earth deposits and stripped of its Polar Silk Road ambitions. The American homeland is shielded beneath an expanding Golden Dome missile defense umbrella. This represents pure, unapologetic realpolitik executed with surgical precision, demonstrating that national greatness is forged through raw leverage and resolute will. Examine the psychological disintegration of the American left as this triumph materializes. Their reaction provides a textbook autopsy of ideological decay. For nearly a decade, liberal commentators ridiculed the strategic acquisition of Arctic territory, mocking the vision on late-night comedy platforms and writing haughty essays regarding international decorum. Now that the pact is signed, their arrogant condescension has curdled into bitter panic. The modern progressive rejects strategic interest, national survival, and civilizational vitality. The left operates on a singular, diseased reflex: whenever an action fortifies the United States, they condemn it; whenever a policy degrades American sovereignty, they celebrate it. Their sudden, feigned concern for Danish sensitivities is entirely fraudulent. These are the very same ideologues who applauded the systematic dissolution of our southern border, begged multinational climate summits to dictate domestic energy consumption, and drained our Strategic Petroleum Reserve to mask domestic inflation. Their outrage reveals the terror of a parasitic managerial class watching hard power dismantle their utopian illusions. Consider the profound humiliation of Canada, an entity that represents the most pathetic spectacle in modern statecraft. Ottawa operates as a disarmed protectorate masquerading as an enlightened moral superpower.

The best way to avoid war is to deter adversaries ahead of time by making clear that aggression will bear a huge cost. The way to do that is by creating a strong military posture, and that, Wretchard argues, is what Trump has done.

The central Western figure in the restoration of deterrence, is the widely hated, grudgingly admired, polarizing figure of Donald J. Trump. Trump is hated because he has stepped on everyone's toes by throwing the entire machinery of international consensus into reverse, often in the most impolitic and galling way. At the same time, even his critics acknowledge, by belated imitation and muttering compliance, the essential necessity of many of DJT's moves. Time alone will tell if DJT will succeed.

The people who oppose the notion of a strong U.S. national security surely see the same thing we do -- that their power is vanishing. U.S. officials warn that what our adversaries cannot achieve in the battlefield or by credible threats to our security posture, they will attempt by deepening domestic fissures. USAID is busted, partisan NGOs are under increased scrutiny, grifters are being exposed and prosecuted, and people now have a fuller understanding of astroturfed demonstrations posing as grassroots outpourings. As we head to the midterms, look out for bogus posts online and fabricated videos.

Parental discipline, restraint and ebikes

Kids are always going to do stupid things and take stupid risks.

Mike McDaniel | September 20, 2026

The laws of physics are immutable and unforgiving, and it's a wonder I survived childhood. My pals and I rode our bicycles beyond the limits of sanity, doing all manner of hair-raising stunts. We didn't wear helmets, which weren't available back in the 1400s. The bikes of the time weren't capable—mostly—of generating death-dealing speeds, so we suffered road rash, bruises, contusions, cuts, and the occasional broken arm or wrist. We had a dim sense of the possible consequences of ignoring those immutable laws, but we had the invulnerability of youth.

Remember the opening scene of Top Gun: Maverick? Maverick took an unauthorized—of course; he's Maverick—flight in a hyper-capable experimental plane. He barely made Mach 10, but decided to push it faster, disintegrating the billion-dollar prototype, and survived the ejection, none the worse for wear! At that altitude and those speeds, he would have been torn apart, but that would have been a short movie.

Reality is different. The laws of physics apply, and violating them carries severe penalties.

In August, in Our kids need MAHA, I worried about our children, who are now riding electric scooters and bikes, and aren't getting the exercise my pals and I got while we thought we were just having fun. But because we're limited to 800 words, I didn't expound on the other, more serious issue: the skyrocketing rate of serious injuries and deaths due to the proliferation of e-bikes:

A pediatric operating room surgeon is sounding the alarm of caution to mothers and fathers worldwide, advising the adults against buying e-bikes for their tykes as the outcomes could be fatal.

The whistleblower's words of wisdom, shared virtually with over 16 million viewers, triggered a chain of testimonials from grieving parents whose kids have either sustained severe injuries or died while riding the motorized two-wheeler — a hot commodity among Gen Zs and younger which has claimed the lives of hundreds in recent years, per 2026 data from the US Consumer Product Safety Commission.

"Don't get an e-bike for your child," Cynlyn, a physician, urged online audiences. "The consequences of e-bike accidents are life-changing and deadly."

"Kids should not be riding them," the expert asserted. "At the very minimum, they should be wearing a helmet."

As one might imagine, most of those maimed and killed are young males.

Researchers for NYU Langone Health analyzed 900 patients treated for injuries caused by electric bike and scooter use at Manhattan's Bellevue Hospital for a May 2026 study, "The Fast and the Fragile: Neurosurgical Trauma in the Age of Micromobility."

The investigators determined that approximately a third of those patients suffered traumatic brain injuries, and 30% needed intensive care. Unsurprisingly, the majority of riders went without a helmet, according to the findings.

The problem is that many, if not most, e-bikes marketed for kids are capable of speeds of 30 MPH and more. Many dispense with pedals, and kids rarely wear helmets of any kind. Few, if any, kids are prepared, mentally, emotionally, or physically, for those kinds of speeds. They don't have the experience, and at even 20 MPH, things happen faster than they can anticipate or respond.

This is my usual, non-electric, ride. The other day, I managed 42 MPH on a relatively steep downhill section. Hypocrisy? Not quite.

I have 60+ years of experience and knowledge. I run first-class puncture-resistant tires, know every millimeter of the bike, which I regularly inspect for the slightest fault, wear a top-rated helmet, and reached that speed on a course I regularly ride. I know every bump and fault on that road. If there was a real risk, I wouldn't have done it. Those kinds of speeds aren't new to me. I once managed 62 MPH on a lighter, faster recumbent under similar conditions. Once was enough.

Kids don't have that experience, nor do they maintain their machines to that degree, if at all, nor do they have the mental development to know precisely what their machines can do and what's a reasonable risk. These consequences are happening far too often:

"My son almost died June 7, 2025. The only thing that saved his life was his helmet," a mother revealed. "He still sustained a skull fracture, broken nose, broken ribs, broken elbow, had to have his top lip reattached and a severe compound fracture to his left leg. So severe that if it were any worse, it would have been amputated."

Kids are always going to do stupid things and take stupid risks. We can't wrap them in bubble wrap, but we can exercise necessary parental discipline, make sure they get substantial exercise, and not give them machines a reasonable parent knows they can't resist using to ignore the laws of physics.
