I was thrilled to see AMAC (the conservative alternative to AARP) put Riley Gaines on the cover of the February 2024 issue of their newsletter as AMAC's 2023 WOMAN OF THE YEAR! I'd heard of "Lia" Thomas, the male swimmer, masquerading as a woman, who had placed 462nd in the Men's swimming division, prior to identifying as a woman. Apparently, HE wanted to win so badly that HE put on a woman's extra-large, extra-tall (he's about 6'6") swimsuit in order to convince spineless officials that HE should be allowed to compete against true women swimmers.

I met Riley Gaines in person at the AzFRW Fall Convention in Tucson last October and heard her story from the "horse's mouth". I was shocked to hear the whole truth about how she regularly trained for 4 hours EVERY DAY. And during COVID, when everything was shut down, including swimming pools, she put on her wetsuit, because it gets pretty cold in those Kentucky winters, and did her 4 hour swimming workout in the closest river everyday!

She went on to tell us about her first encounter with "Lia" Thomas in 2022 at the NCAA Women's Swimming Championship for the 200-meter freestyle. At the end of the race she looked over and saw "Lia" also had a '5' by HIS name and in that moment realized they had tied for 5th place! She said her first reaction was how thrilled she was for those women finishing ahead of her that beat "Lia", but was also shocked.

To prove HOW spineless those judges were, the 5th place trophy was publicly given to "Lia" Thomas (an anatomically correct, biological man). Riley was taken aside and told she would get her trophy "in the mail," then didn't receive it for months.

Riley was alarmed to find out the NCAA had designated locker rooms as "Unisex", allowing 'female-identifying' males to LEGALLY enter private spaces, previously reserved for women!

Riley told us at the convention that she and the other women swimmers looked around to see if someone would come to their support. But no coaches, fathers or other 'protectors' came to their aid, which was when she decided she would need to stand up for herself and women athletes everywhere. Riley gave up a full scholarship to Dental School to tour the country, speaking at conservative events, telling her story to whoever will listen. Remember Riley as we do our part to get our country back!

If you have AARP check out AMAC instead (www.amac.us). They are gaining momentum in today's market, offering the same services as AARP, except they share our values and commitment to America. You can be sure they will never go WOKE!

BETTY WEBSTER
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY

Hello LBRW,
 February is known for many things, but mostly it is the month to show our love to one another. We all know that the 14th is Valentines day, but did you know that on the 17th it is "National Acts of Kindness

Day". I want to encourage you to show your love for others and be kind. Our time here is short and we need to let the loved ones in our life know how valued they are. Please let me know if anyone in our club needs that touch of kindness so I can send them a card on behalf of the club. So far in February I have only sent out birthday cards and most of them are being viewed and enjoyed. I look forward to seeing you all in March

SPOTLIGHT MEMBER – KATHY MOLZEN

I was born in Santa Monica CA in April of 1941. Lived there awhile and after my brother, Michael, was born in 1943 we moved to Sherman Oaks. It was a wonderful 2 story Spanish style home and I remember the stone staircase well, Michael and I had contests to see who could bump down the fastest if I recall. The banister had rot iron spikes so no banister sliding. From there we moved to Northridge, CA when it was mostly dirt roads and acre size lots. Huge garden and many fruit trees, even a large grape arbor that served as a hide out during the many cowboy and indian games were special features. Wish I still had that cowgirl skirt, shirt and holster and my cap pistol.

My dad had been sent to CA for health reasons and mom followed him. MY extended family was all in the east so only a few visits occurred with grandparents, aunts, uncles and cousins.

In 1951 we moved to Sierra Madre CA where I spent most of the rest of my life. In the spring of 1960, following my tumultuous high school years my 17 year old brother was killed in a motorcycle accident. Life is a blur for awhile. I was in my second year of RN nurse training (following in my mother's footsteps) at that time and went on to graduate in August of 1960. I found nursing in hospital and doctor office to be quite rewarding. I had always intended to be a teacher too (my mother's sister was a teacher in PA) so in 1962 I enrolled in LASC (now CSULA) and finished elementary education in 1965. I then waited for my fiance to return from his first tour in Vietnam. We were married and my son Craig was born. After Richard returned from his second tour in 1968 we divorced.

I got a job teaching at the Rosemead School District and taught Special Ed and grades 2, 3, and 4 at Savannah School from 1968-2001 when I retired. My second husband Tom, a wall-covering/painting contractor, and I were married in 1971. We did some traveling, especially after I retired: had an RV for some of it, loved cruising, and traveled many places including Africa, Canada, Mexico and several trips to Europe. My son Craig had joined the Army following his ROTC training through college and was stationed in Germany for a total of 9 years prompting those travels. Both of their children were born in Germany (12 years apart) so in order to see them it was necessary to travel. I still have itchy feet and go as often as I can. Tom had 3 boys so there are 8 grandchildren and now 11 great grandchildren mostly in No. CA. I also have friends in Carson City NV that I fit in when I drive up that way. My folks moved to that lovely city in 1973 and I keep in touch with the friends left from their wide circle of friends.

Hobbies include: Travel (often now with Barlett Tours), scrapbooking, reading, CWC chair, bible studies and involvement in several groups in town as well as enjoying lunch and dinner out with friends. I very much enjoy entertaining in my home here in town and am super excited that Tom and I found this city for our relocation when he finally decided to retire in 2011. We had come with the kids and boat several times. He passed away in 2013 and I would not consider, by choice, another place to live!

An entirely plausible (and chilling) scenario for how and when the Dems will drop Biden from the ticket and run Michelle for president By Thomas Lifson

Heather Higgins has done her homework and put together a very smart prediction of how the Dems will thread the needle and eject Biden from the ticket and substitute their ideal replacement candidate, Michelle Obama. I've been a skeptic that she could be persuaded, given her obvious distaste for politics, but Heather provides the most persuasive argument I've seen for how this could be accomplished. And with her close study of the Democrats' party bylaws and electoral law, she zeroes in on the necessary timing and means of pulling off the big switcheroo.

Given the magnitude of the disaster that a successful Michelle Obama would represent, and the likelihood of something similar to the Higgins divination actually happening, I must warn you: read it and weep. You can read the original prophecy here. But to save time, I will briefly summarize below.

First, her explanation of why Michelle will consent to run. Biden's example has changed the job.

"Tosh!" you say. "She's said she hates politics, she doesn't want to run." Ah, she made every one of those statements before she got to see Biden redefining the job and expectations for the presidency. Now she knows that when the media wants a president in place, a four-day workweek, consisting of one social obligation per day, and everything else delegated, will suffice. And that's without a highly experienced First Gentleman.

And Heather points to signs that Michelle has already relented:

Mrs. Obama has been acting for several years as though she is rebranding for the gig. Her book launch looked nothing like a book tour, but a reintroduction, complete with billboards and sell-out celebrity interview performances, of the new Oprah-ized, smiling, hey-girlfriend, loving-America Michelle.

A few weeks ago, she said publicly she was "terrified" about the potential results of the election, saying her fears of the possible outcomes keep her awake at night.

And just recently an entire special edition of Life magazine about the inspiring Michelle Obama parked itself for $14.99 at your nearest supermarket checkout line. The cover may say "The Post-White House Phenomenon," but everything post-White House is confined to five paragraphs in the first introductory pages – while the rest of the 112 glossy pages are one-third backstory and two-thirds Michelle in the White House, looking presidential. The last page is Michelle on stage at the 2016 convention, solo, looking like she's just received the nomination – and under the heading "Crowd Pleaser." On the back cover are the Obamas at their second inaugural ball – with President Obama bowing to the stately Michelle.

Moreover, Michelle can be persuaded that she is the only person who can eject Kamala from the ticket. My view is that this is a requirement, because Harris – should the worst happen and she succeeds Michelle – cannot be trusted to carry out the orders from Valerie Jarrett and Susan Rice, who co-chair the de facto deep state presidium that is actually running the Biden presidency.

It would make no sense for Biden to remove himself from the ticket in order to simply elevate Vice President Kamala Harris. The point of the whole exercise is to win. Michelle Obama is the only potential candidate who could safely replace a black woman on the Democrat ticket without causing a major political disruption inside a core Democrat voter group. Plus, Michelle is Teflon: a popular celebrity with little track record – and the guarantee that any criticism will elicit a chorus of "racist!" and "sexist!" accusations. She is by far the hardest candidate for Trump to beat.

Now, as to the question of how, and especially when, the substitution could be pulled off. It should be soon after the convention:

The switch could be done at the convention – but that requires 300 delegate signatures, and would open the door to a lot of politicking over several weeks by other potential candidates. It would make '68 look like a picnic, and potentially put Michelle in the grub-position of seeking support just like everyone else.

Here's how that could work:

Salvation lies in the DNC rules. Remember the New Jersey "Switcheroo" way back in 2002, when Democrats turned a sure loss of a Senate seat into a win by swapping out their losing candidate at the last minute, overriding a state law that said it was too late in the cycle for such a switch?

Bet on Democrats to pull the same "switcheroo," but at an even higher level – and even later than you expect – possibly at but more likely about two weeks after their convention, giving us a "September Surprise." Joe Biden is a placeholder quelling current competition for a much better bet – Michelle Obama – just in time to turn a sure loss in 2024 into a surprise potential victory. (snip)

Swapping out candidates so close to an election isn't as rare a thing as you might think. In that very same 2002 election cycle, for instance, Minnesota Democrats had to replace their Senate candidate, incumbent Paul Wellstone, after he was killed in a plane crash just days before the election. And almost exactly two years earlier, Missouri Democrats had to replace Gov. Mel Carnahan, their candidate for the U.S. Senate, in late October, when he died in a plane crash.

As the New Jersey case proved, the closer you can get to Election Day before making the switch, the better chance you will have. Less time for the other side to conduct new opposition research, do some polling, figure out a new strategy, and create advertising campaigns. Less time, too, that the replacement candidate needs to actually campaign.

I wish that I could find a flaw in Heather's work, but she has anticipated all my quibbles. We need urgently to start figuring out how to frustrate this plan.
